CANDIDATES FOR POSIMASTER When there is no excitement in the ranks of the democratic party by virtue of an office to be filled and a contest between friends, and as the people, it day and night over others' troubles-forgetting their own-the members of the republican party enter the arens, take up the cudgel and promise to keep the fires of excitement burning until after the inauguration of the newly elected president—and then some. That "Joe" Crupper, as he is familiarly known, will be a power behind the throne in the distribution of federal patrorage in Vir-ginia, especially in this city, is conce-ded. That he desires a change in conditions at the postoffice in this city and will bend every energy to accomplish it is believed. That he is master of the situation there is little doubt. This fact is made much stronger when the telegraph wires announce to the world to-day the selection of Mr. Frank Hitchcock by President-elect Tafe to preside over the deliberations of the postoffice department. The newly selected post-master-general was chairman of the national republican committee in the last campaign and as such was seen by Mr. Crupper often. He admired the ability and straightforwardness of the Alexandrian and appointed him a member of the savisory committee of the Sa'e of Virginia to the national republican committee. mittee—a fact known by a very few peo-ple and kept out of print on account of the extreme modesty of the holder of the honor. Mr. Crupper is not a sufferer from rheumatism that you could notice but it seems that every time Mr. Taft was heralded as being as Hot Springs Mr. Orupper happened that way. That Mr. Orupper desires no office is true and he has so expressed himself. Being a prosperous business man it is a question a to whether he would yield to a demau'd for his services. Some have suggested that inasmuch as there will be a scramble for the lat position of postmaster, and insemuch as a contest between several of his friends wight endanger the success of either of them, in order to insura a change at the postoffice-a thing dear to his heart—he may be persuaded to sgain take up the duties he relinquished several years ago. The candidates for the position at the present writing are Mr. Frank T. Evans, a member of council from the Fourth ward, lifelong republican, who was the regular nominee of the republican party in op-position to the democratic candidate for the legislature of Virginia-as such he polled more votes than any similar candida'e, having received a'most as many votes in one ward as the republican can-didate for Congress mustered in the entire city-Mr. Armstead Eggborn, chairman of the city republican committee, and popular employee of the Virginia Safe Deposit and Trust Corporation; Mr.

present incumbent. EDUCATIONAL MEETING.

The case of Lee Drowns, suspected of creating and entering the tool house in the Prisbyterian cemetery on the night the Police Court this morning. As was stated in yest rday's Gazette, a brass dagger which was in the house at the time was found on Drowes' person when he was searched at the sation house a few days later after he had been arrested on providing chickens. The scane was a brilliant one. of the 20th instant, was brought before on suspicion of stealing chickens from W. M. Priest. He was dismissed on this charge for want of evidence against him. When the police learned that the dirk was in the bopse on the night it was burned, they restreated Drowns. This morning the owner of the dagger sp-peared and identified it. He stated that his wife, accompanied by her little boy, went to the cemetery about two months ago. The boy, who had been using the dagger as a plaything, lost it while in the cemeiery. A colored man tamed Stanton, who is employed in the cemetery, later found the dagger and placed it in the tool house, supposing that he would sooner or later find the owner. Stanton, who was present in the court, testified that the implement was in the tool house the night it was destroyed. Drowns, when he took the stand in his own defense, said he found the dirk at the intersection of Wilkes and Henry streets last Saturday morning. A razor was also in the tool house on the night it was des royed, and it was alleged that Drowns endeavored to sell one to a second-hand dealer shortly after the fire. The dealer, however, did not positively identify him. Justice Thompson sent the accused on to the grand jury.

While walking in the northessiera section he was inveigled by the Shepherd woman into a second-story room of a house. Phillips had been drinking, and, ancording to his testimony, the woman kept pulling at his vest. She finally as-saulted him, and after driving Phillips from the house she renewed the attack siter he reached the street. Phillips was positive in statiog he had the watch when te entered the house. The woman in her defense denied the charge seems, could not exist without worrying urged against her. She was sent to the grand jury.
